January 13, 2011

Milwaukee-based Golden Angels Network is one of the investors providing $1 million in venture funds to AquaMost, a Madison firm that has developed a water purification system.

AquaMost said Thursday its investors also include Wisconsin Investment Partners of Madison. Todd Asmuth, AquaMost president and CEO, said the fund raising will allow the company to hire three to five engineers and lab associates for commercial development of the system.

The company has orders and a distribution plan in place and is working to turn its prototype devices into field-ready units. The AquaMost purification system combines patented and patent-pending inventions originating in the labs of University of Wisconsin–Madison scientists.
